

PRCC board to discuss vo-tech center today

BY DENA BISNETTE
The Pearl River Community College board is scheduled to meet today to possibly decide the fate of the vocational-technical center in Hancock County.

The center has become controversial in the past two weeks because PRCC officials have been informed by the state junior college board that it is illegal for community colleges to fund secondary programs, although there is no prohibition regarding the operation of such programs.

PRCC has been providing high-school level courses at the center for the past 16 years. The college officials' initial reaction was to ask the Hancock County School District to take over the funding, which Superintendent Terrell Randolph would be a financial hardship for the district.

However, the center is also used by the Bay St. Louis-Waveland School District and St. Stanislaus.

At the Bay-Waveland district's meeting Monday, the superintendent of that district, Dr. Roger Oge, presented the information he has about the matter.

Other than Bay St. Louis Councilman Jim Thriffley, who is a member of the PRCC board and has served as its president, no representatives of PRCC were present to ask question.

Except for a consistent commitment to the continued need for vocational-technical education in the county and a vow to find some way to keep the center open, most of the information presented has already been brought up at other meetings, including a board of supervisors' discussion last week.

Oge stated that he and his board have, at this point, received no official communications from PRCC regarding the center.

The school board's reaction was to authorize Oge to continue research on the question and to put its support of continued vocational-technical education in the form of a resolution.

Thriffley stated Wednesday that he understood that a special committee, including Randolph, will make recommendations to the PRCC board.

In addition, College President Ted Alexander is expected to make a recommendation when the meeting begins at 2 p.m. today.

Thriffley said he does not know if the board will decide on the recommendations today or if they will accept them for further consideration.

"It will not close. There will be no interruption in college programs," Thriffley said.

He said that he believes the high school programs will be taken over by the two school districts.

If it costs $200,000 to operate the center this year, it must be considered that the school districts together are currently

FATAL CRASH—In a drenching downpour Wednesday, Emergency workers remove Tanya G. Alley, 19, from her car following a collision on Lower Bay Road that claimed the life of John Lambert Bordages, 83, of Lakeshore. Bordages, driving a Cadillac, and Alley, driving a Ford Escort, apparently were involved in a head-on collision about noon, according to Sheriff Ronnie Peterson. Bordages was pronounced dead at Hancock Medical Center. An autopsy will be performed today, according to Coroner Harold Stiglet. Alley was transported to Memorial Hospital in Gulfport with leg and chest injuries. (Echo staff photo by D.C. Harvill)

WOMAN INJURED

A 72-year-old Clermont Harbor woman was injured in a Sunday afternoon accident when the driver lost control of the vehicle in which she was a passenger.

Minnie Scofield, 72, of P.O. Box 229, Clermont Harbor, was originally taken to Hancock Medical Center by Mobile Medic Ambulance Service. She was later transferred to the Veterans' Administration Hospital at Biloxi, where a spokesperson stated that a patient named Minnie Scofield remained hospitalized Wednesday afternoon.

The driver, 62-year-old Deelmer Scofield, was treated and released from Hancock Medical Center.

According to Bay St. Louis Police Officer Don Osco, Deelmer Scofield apparently lost control of the vehicle on Main Street and went up on the sidewalk on the passenger side of the car.

The car ended up in front of 405 Main Street after travelling about 25 yards, Osco stated. The vehicle hit a concrete table, a sapling and two trees.

The car stopped when it hit the second tree, the officer added.

Osco said the vehicle was extensively damaged on its right side.

Assisting at the scene in addition to Mobile Medic were Bay police officers Chuck James and Marvin Carter and the Bay St. Louis Fire Department's rescue unit.

Traffic control was required for about 45 minutes because one lane of the street had to be blocked while emergency personnel assisted the injured and investigated the accident, Osco said.

Bay native finds himself on remote Pacific island

BY D.C. HARVILL

Most people might not consider a speck of soil isolated by hundreds of miles of ocean the perfect place to spend a year of their lives, but one Bay St. Louis native has done just that and is returning for another year.

After serving as a supply and logistics specialist in the U.S. Army on tiny Johnston Atoll, Corporal Ron Lusich spent last week on the Coast visiting relatives. Sunday morning he departed for Johnston via Hawaii.

Lusich is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Oren Lusich of Bay St. Louis and Ronald Daley of Detroit, Michigan.

His grandparents are Mrs. Nelius Rhodes of Bay St. Louis and the late Judge Nelius Rhodes and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Daley of Pass Christian.

Bay school board accepts $1,170,180 building bid

BY DENA BISNETTE

A bid of $1,170,180 has been accepted for the construction of a new classroom addition to Bay Senior High School.

The Bay St. Louis-Waveland School Board unanimously accepted the bid from H. Gordon Myrick, Inc., of Gulfport at Monday night's meeting. The board based its vote on a recommendation from Fred Wagner, the architect for the project.

Wagner said 11 qualified bidders were vying for the project, which included both a base bid price and several alternates. Most of the alternates were additions or deletions of covered walks, changes in types of floor covering and cabinetry, and alternative construction schedules.

The alternates which were accepted include some covered walkways, deletion of a wall around the cafeteria service yard and inclusion of lockers and cabinets in the construction contract.

H. Gordon Myrick said the work on the slab for the new building will begin as soon as weather permits.

Wagner said the design includes about 22 classrooms. The number is not specific, however, because one of the rooms will be larger than standard classrooms and can be divided into two or three classrooms as needed, or used as it is designed.

The contract is part of the district's long-range building program.

The last part of the program, a contract for a multi-purpose building at the high school, has not been let. While the board has announced no specific plans for its use, there has been discussion toward using the structure as an auditorium, band hall and arts center.

struction firm submitted the winning bid for the project, which will add more classrooms to Bay Senior High School. (Echo staff photo by Dena Bisnette)

Law officials butt heads over passes for trustees

BY D.C. HARVILL

Angered over learning a convicted felon, serving a sentence in Hancock County Jail, had attended Waveland's St. Patrick's Day Parade, Bay St. Louis Police Chief Ray Murphy is questioning the way the jail is being operated.

The chief's ire was raised when a Bay Police deputy told him George Michael Nami, recently sentenced to eight years in prison on two charges of selling cocaine, was seen at the parade.

"It's a slap in the face to police, the courts and the people of Bay St. Louis. We spend thousands of dollars fighting drugs and then he (Sheriff Ronnie Peterson) turns around and lets him out to run the streets," Murphy said Wednesday.

"He (Peterson) doesn't have the authority to let him out. If it were a city or county prisoner, maybe, but not a state prisoner. Just because he is sheriff doesn't mean he can let criminals out to run the streets," Murphy said.

Murphy said he feels Peterson violated a court order by granting Nami a pass to leave jail, and is in contempt of court.

Jail trustees are allowed into jail offices to use the telephone and know the security system, Murphy claims.

"The trustees are running the jail," the chief said.

Peterson, however, maintains that the jail's work release program and policy of granting short-term passes to worthy prisoners has been operated for years and is allowed by state law.

"Statute number 47-5-415 mandates that we can operate these programs," Peterson said.

The statute reads: "The sheriff, in the case of county and state inmates incarcerated in county jails... may institute a procedure for granting passes and leaves to inmates participating in (trustee program) and may grant such passes or leave in deserving cases not to exceed...72 hours."

"To get a pass you have to be a working inmate, considered a trustee, in for a non-violent type crime. The law allows for us to grant passes up to 72 hours, but we never grant them for more than eight hours," the sheriff said.

Before a pass is granted the inmate has to file a request stating the purpose of the leave. The pass gives them permission to go only to a specified place, according to the sheriff. The pass must be approved by the warden, assistant warden and the sheriff, Peterson said.

"Nami's pass was for him to go to his home on Central Avenue. The parade passed in front of his house. He was seen in his yard," the sheriff said.

"If Mr. Murphy doesn't know how the jail is operated, then he should come over sometime and I will be glad to discuss it with him. We'll even be glad to give him a tour of the facility. But if he's never had the experience of running a jail he shouldn't try to tell me how to run one," Peterson said.

"If he wants to run for sheriff again and wins, then he can run it the way he wants. While I'm sheriff I'll run it the way I want to," Peterson said.

Murphy ran against Peterson in the last sheriff's election. Murphy said he has consulted the District Attorney's office but had not receives a reply Wednesday afternoon.

Both the District Attorney and State Attorney General were unavailable when attempts were made to reach them for comments late Wednesday.

being paid between $100,000 and $115,000 in average daily attendance funds for students actually attending the vocational-technical school.

Nobody has ever spoken publicly about the ADA money, Thrifflay said, but with the base of $115,000 and the maintenance funds of $30,000 that would be diverted to the two school districts, they are likely to be able to run the center.

The most he expects taxes to rise, if at all, is about a half-mill given those circumstances. A half-mill countywide would generate about $75,000.

It would take a two-mill increase without the ADA and maintenance monies.

Thrifflay said his personnel recommendation would be to phase in the changeover, with the school districts putting up about $15,000 for the 1989-90 school year and PRCC supplying the rest. The school districts would then be more able to take over the following year.

Safety needs emphasis for Holiday travelers

Thousands of Americans will be traveling the highways of America this weekend visiting relatives and friends.

Over a holiday like Easter, there is an increase in the number of deaths caused by accidents on our highways and roadways.

A large number of accidents with fatalities have at least one drinking driver.

It is hoped those who have a tendency to drink, would think twice, and leave the driving to a sober person.

Nothing can mar a holiday such as Easter more than having a family member involved in an accident causing a fatality or fatalities.

Easter is a time for celebration, not a time for sadness.

Think of travel safety.

"QUOTABLE QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

Easter is the time of year when many area residents attend special church services.

The Annual Community Easter Sunrise Service sponsored by the area's ministers will be held on the lawn of Christ Episcopal Church, Beach Boulevard, Bay St. Louis.

The services are to begin at 6:30 a.m. and the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce will provide coffee and donuts which will be served in Virginia Hall following the services.

We are hoping there will be a large attendance at the Community Easter Sunrise Service or other special services in the area.

Police have nabbed two culprits for the removal of the gazebo on the Ulman Avenue Pier.

The gazebo located at the end of the pier one quarter of a mile from Beach Boulevard had survived several hurricanes, and those of us who use the pier for fishing or just walking knew it was a sturdy structure.

Police say the pair are alleged to have pulled the gazebo from the pier and tossed it overboard, so in addition to destroying county property there could be a matter of a water hazard created by the floating materials.

It seems that azaleas on the whole are at their zenith of bloom this week in our area.

There are many, many bushes and clusters of azaleas throughout the cities and county. Some of those are very large and they are all radiant with bright, colorful blossoms.

We realize the heavy rains have caused some to droop a bit, yet they are still beautiful.

Azaleas are known to do well in our soil and take very little care, just a little fertilizer and plenty of moisture during the dry times of the year.

Wouldn't it be nice if every yard had azaleas.

THE PEOPLE'S BUSINESS

From the Mississippi Economic Council

Mississippians could be this state's worst enemy, but a program is being designed to change all that.

When it comes to Mississippi's image, the citizens of this state do more to perpetuate a negative image than any movie ever could. Some Mississippians lack a sense of pride that is easily detected by outsiders. Therefore, in order to improve the state's external image, one must begin with the citizens of this state.

That is the objective of a new program to be introduced at the Mississippi Economic Council's 40th annual membership meeting to be held April 12-13 at the Downtown Holiday Inn in Jackson. 'Look Around Mississippi' is an MEC-sponsored program designed to improve the state's image nationally and, at the same time, to improve the attitudes of Mississippians about themselves.

The time has come to inform the world about what Mississippi is really like today. Negative images of 25 years ago must be replaced with the positive aspects of Mississippi occurring every day.

Mississippi, once considered a backward state, is in the process of developing a hi-tech industry responsible for many of the world's most sophisticated advances in such areas as space exploration, acoustic research, computer technology, and in the field of medicine.

All Mississippians need to take time and learn more about the good things happening in this state in order to develop some sense of pride. After all, it's only our home.

ated advances in such areas as space exploration, acoustic research, computer technology, and in the field of medicine.

All Mississippians need to take time and learn more about the good things happening in this state in order to develop some sense of pride. After all, it's only our home.

"Better come out, children. Daddy has work to do."

EYES ON MISSISSIPPI

By Bill Minor

One might have reasonably expected that the revelations of corruption in the Mississippi Public Service Commission would have prompted the Legislature to reform the PSC and do away with the old system of electing the three commissioners.

Perish the thought. Most legislators apparently are perfectly satisfied with the old ways of running what is perhaps the most vital state regulatory agency that deals with issues affecting Mississippians' pocketbooks.

In fact, lawmakers passed a bill to take away Gov. Ray Mabus' power under a long-standing state law to fill any vacancies in on the PSC by appointment rather than have to call an election.

Mabus vetoed the bill. Last week two attempts to override his veto narrowly failed to get the required two-thirds vote in the House.

But the vote indicated that a strong majority of the House members want to keep the old elective system even though one former commissioner and one present commissioner are under federal indictments for taking bribes in connection with a utility case before the commission.

Both former commissioner Lynn Havens and present commissioner D. W. Snyder are slated to go on trial in federal court in Jackson April 17, together with wealthy Texas oilman/businessman Travis Ward, who is accused of giving the bribes.

Havens, who had resigned last year while under federal investigation, is known to have been cooperating with the U.S. Attorney in preparation of the case.

This column has learned that Havens will likely enter a guilty plea and emerge at the trial as the government's star witness against Snyder and Ward.

Sources close to the investigation indicate that new revelations of corruption within the Public Service Commission will unfold in the trial from Havens' testimony.

The PSC investigation has been broadened and may touch others connected with the commission, this column learned. Thus far, nothing has been revealed publicly to implicate PSC Commissioner Nielsen Cochran in any form of corruption.

Cochran, the brother of U.S. Sen. Thad Cochran, has been thought to be "immune" to the federal investigation since U.S. Attorney George Phillips must rely on Sen. Cochran's recommendation for his reappointment this year.

Because of the complexity of regulating utility monopolies, the huge amounts of money involved in cases which come before the commission, some lawmakers are convinced the entire Public Service Commission system needs to be reformed beginning with how the commissioners are selected.

Under the present system, the elective commissioners need have no technical qualifications, education requirements or be screened as to their character and outside economic interests.

A small, three-member commission, each representing an electoral district, makes each commissioner relatively powerful, but more interested in his patronage in his own turf rather than taking a statewide view of the problems of utility regulation.

The loosely knit, political operation of the present commission has become notorious over the years, resulting in blatant cronyism between the commissioners and the interests which they regulate.

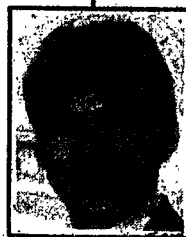

Some will recall the newspaper disclosure in the late 1970s that two of the three members of the commission had been taken on an all-expenses-paid duck hunting trip to Arkansas by officials of Bechtel Corp., the California-based construction company which built the $3.5 billion Grand Gulf Nuclear Generating Plant.

The duck hunting trip had come just prior to the time that the PSC granted a construction permit for the Grand Gulf plant with virtually no prior public notice for opposing views.

One reform proposal that has been advanced calls for replacing the present three-member elected commission with a five-member commission appointed by the governor, with staggered terms, subject to Senate confirmation.

The commissioners would be required to have certain qualifications such as being a registered professional engineer, CPA, attorney or hold a master's degree. No one could be appointed who had been employed by or under contract to any company regulated by the PSC two years prior to appointment.

While some around the Legislature seem to want to take the Public Service Commission out of the political morass, a lot more seem to want to keep it there.

REPORT FROM THE SENATE

By Senator Gene Taylor

These last two weeks of the 1989 Session will be spent in balancing the state budget and in trying to reach compromises on a number of bills which have passed the Senate and the House of Representatives in different forms.

I am pleased to report that we will be able to fund state government for next year without increasing taxes. This means that most agencies will be funded at near their present budget level with few expanded or new programs implemented.

Last week, the Senate funded the Medicaid Program at $115.2 million in state money, which should bring in another $445 million in federal funds. The state funds are $20 million more than this year's appropriation, which is needed to fund federally mandated expansions in the program.

The final figures for this budget now depend on the governor's action on the bills funding the state's three charity hospitals. Both the senate and the house have funded the hospitals for the coming year, but the governor has supported closing the facilities and may use his right to veto the bills.

Our Senate Appropriations Committee chairman pledged to increase the Medicaid budget to try to provide care for more needy if the charity hospitals are closed by the governor. The closure would provide some $6.9 million which would be available to match with $24 million in federal money to help persons needing health care statewide.

Also last week, the senate passed a bill to allow the Housing Finance Corporation to issue an additional $100 million in bonds to provide low-cost loans for housing.

A bill aimed at helping Mississippi Veterans Memorial Stadium in Jackson generate more funds became highly controversial over proposals to charge for daily parking on the grounds and to encourage the playing of more football games in the stadium. The bill, as it passed the senate, would allow up to $1 to be charged for parking on non-game or special event days with University Medical Center staff, students, and patients exempted.

Regarding football scheduling, the bill would require the College Board to develop a proposal to implement an annual schedule for the playing of games in the stadium by Mississippi universities to include games between Ole Miss, Mississippi State, and University of Southern Mississippi.

The bill also does away with the present 50-cents-per-ticket surcharge and reduces the amusement tax from 10 percent to 6 percent in an attempt to allow the stadium commission to negotiate more contracts for events at the stadium. The various measures in his bill are not final—because of differences between the versions passed by each house, it will be finalized by a conference committee composed of senate and house members.

The following are some of the bills which have passed both houses of the legislature and have been signed into law by the governor:

- * a bill that provides for the immediate revocation of parole for a parolee convicted of a felony while on parole, whether in Mississippi or another state

- * a bill designed to prohibit out-of-state residents from purchasing Mississippi resident hunting and fishing licenses, which cost less than out-of-state licenses. The bill requires the applicant to show proof of residency such as a Mississippi driver's license, an identification card from the Department of Public Safety or a student identification card from a Mississippi college or university

- * a bill, known as the Tort Reform Law, which amends the state's civil justice laws. A major provision reduces the general statute of limitations from six to three years. It also limits the percentage of damages to the percentage of fault determined by a judge or jury or 50 percent maximum. For example, if a person is assessed 10 percent fault, but the person assessed 90 percent fault cannot pay his part, the person assessed 10 percent can be charged up to 50 percent

- * a bill increasing retirement benefits for public employees
- * a bill creating a beaver control program

- * a bill setting guidelines for universities to offer instructional programs at off-campus sites
- * a bill allowing boards of supervisors to increase chancery, county and circuit court jurors' compensation to up to $40 per day

- * a bill deleting the law regulating deer camps

A bill to outlaw motor vehicle chop shops has passed both houses and has gone to the governor for his signature into law. Chop shops are used for dismantling vehicles and selling the pieces or altering vehicles for resale.

Another bill which has passed both houses is entitled the Mississippi marine Litter Act. It prohibits the disposal of plastics and other garbage in marine waters and sets penalties for violations. It also requires marinas and other access areas used by vessels to have proper disposal facilities.

I would be glad to hear your comments on any legislation during the year, and you may write to me at the Mississippi State Senate, P.O. Box 1018, Jackson, MS 39215 or call 359-3770 and I will return your call as soon as possible.

IN CONGRESS

By Representative Trent Lott

Secretary of Defense

U.S. Senator Trent Lott, expressed his utmost approval in the Senate's confirmation of Representative Richard Cheney, R-Wyoming, to serve as Secretary of Defense in the Bush Administration.

"After working with Rep. Cheney, my successor as Republican Whip, I am fully confident and aware of his ability to provide the best leadership possible for the Department of Defense and the people of this nation," Lott said. The Senate vote to confirm Cheney was unanimous.

During confirmation hearings before the Armed Services Committee, Sen. Lott spoke highly of Mr. Cheney and his qualifications to serve as a member of the President's Cabinet as Secretary of Defense.

"Dick has a tremendous knowledge of how both the executive and legislative branches of our government operate. After serving President Gerald Ford as his Chief of Staff, and serving the people of Wyoming as their Congressman since 1978, he has become a very well respected figure in Washington," Lott added.

Most recently Cheney was elected to serve as Republican Whip, the 2nd ranking position in the House leadership. Prior to that, he served as the Chairman of the House Republican Policy Committee for seven years and Chairman of the Republican Conference since June, 1987.

Homestead Exemption deadline nears

The filing deadline for Homestead Exemption is April 1. According to Hancock County Tax Collector and Assessor Edward Murtagh, homeowners can not receive Homestead Exemption automatically. They must sign up for it each year between Jan. 1 and April 1.

No one can be given Homestead Exemption after the deadline. Yvonne Ladner, chief deputy tax collector, explained that Homestead Exemption is a tax credit given to resident homeowners.

You can not qualify for Homestead Exemption if you own a home but reside elsewhere.

"The purpose is to encourage people to come and live here," Murtagh added.

The Homestead Exemption of 1942 created the program, which is available statewide. The state sets the rate for Homestead Exemption, which like property taxes is based on the assessed valuation of the individual home.

Ladner said full exemption was added in 1965, allowing certain groups of people to receive a tax credit of up to $10,000. Those eligible must be fully disabled, such as a disabled veteran; receiving Social Security disability benefits; or age 65 or older.

Anyone who is eligible and files before April 1 of this year will receive the credit on taxes due by Jan. 1, 1990.

"We still have close to 500 people who have not renewed this year," Ladner said.

Murtagh explained that "500 is a lot of people to be this late, this time of year."

One problem with filing is that people forget the deadline or get it confused with the income tax deadline, which is April 15.

The tax office spends $4,000 to $5,000 each year to print and send out notices to those homeowners who have filed in past years.

Other than those who have filed in the past, "we have no way of knowing who is eligible," Ladner added.

During the past few years, the average number of notices sent out has ranged from 7,500 to 7,600.

The notices are followed with reminder postcards March 1. This year, about 600 were mailed.

The post office cooperates by returning applications and reminder postcards for forwarding. Some are forwarded two or three times.

"This is something our citizens are entitled to," said Murtagh. "We want to do our utmost to find everyone who hasn't signed."

Anyone who is uncertain whether he is qualified or whether he has filed or not may call the tax office at 467-5227.

"We'll be happy to look it up in the computer for you," Ladner said.

Hometown News from the Capitol City

By Mississippi Reporting Service

The fate of the state's charity hospitals bounced into Gov. Ray Mabus' court this week after the Mississippi House of Representatives voted to fund the facilities one more year.

Rep. J. P. Compretta voted with the majority on all three appropriations bills to fund the three charity hospitals.

The House agreed earlier this year to close the Vicksburg, Laurel and Meridian institutions, but supporters were able to suspend deadlines for further consideration of the bills.

The governor can now sign the funding bills, let them become law without his signature or veto them, an option many lawmakers think Mabus will use.

Mabus wants to expand the Medicaid program by combining the $7 million he says will be saved when the hospitals are closed and $28 million in federal matching funds.

The House failed to override the veto, a move in support of electing commissioners. The vote was 72-42, four votes short of the 76 needed for an override.

House members who voted for the override said Mabus was usurping the public's right to vote. But supporters of the veto claim the appointment process gives the governor the opportunity to name blacks and women to government posts.

The House and Senate will hash out differences on any of the remaining bills in conference committees. Scheduled for committee conferences are a bill providing for a full-time state parole board, a bill requiring landlords make improvements on slum apartments, rural shacks and row houses and a bill requiring the oversight of the Department of Natural Resources at certain hazardous waste facilities.

The Senate recommended several bills to conference committees, including a bill establishing equity funding of school districts across the state. A $17 million state-funded grant to aid poorer districts in meeting the minimum standards would be set up if the bill is agreed

Cochran, Lott cite $920,000 weatherization grant for state

U.S. Senators Thad Cochran and Trent Lott announced that Mississippi is receiving $920,591 to continue a weatherization program the next 12 months.

The senators said the Department of Energy was making the grant to the state for continuation of a program to weatherize the homes of low-income residents.

"We are pleased the Energy Department is making this funding available to continue this important program for low-income citizens in Mississippi," the senators commented.

The agency said the grant, to the Governor's Office of Federal-State Programs, was for the period ending March 31, 1990.

of Hawaii and 200 miles north of the equator. Until 1964 it was associated with nuclear tests conducted in the region by the United States.

Today, military activity on the island includes the construction of a chemical weapons deactivation center.

If the project is successful, similar deactivation facilities will be built in Utah and Kentucky, Lusich said.

His duties include supporting all civilian and military agencies on the island with supplies and equipment.

An atoll is an island consisting of a lagoon surrounded by a coral reef. Johnston, however, no longer retains the atoll configuration; it has been altered for the military's purposes.

"About 75 percent of the island is manmade. The rest is just one big coral reef," Lusich explained.

Dominated by an airstrip that runs nearly its entire length, when approached from the sky, the one-mile wide by two-mile long island bears a striking resemblance to an aircraft carrier.

At times, limited to such a confined area can be stressful, according to Lusich.

"Everywhere you look in any direction, all you can see is water. While out there you can learn some interesting things about yourself. You have a lot of time to think about things you've done in the past and things you want to do in the future," he said.

Things taken for granted on the mainland assume new significance on the island.

"When you get a letter in the mail it is the highlight of your life. We only get three deliveries a week," Lusich said.

"Some people don't get mail and they just turn into barracks rats. They just stay in their quarters all the time, and that's not good," he explained.

Many forms of entertainment have been made available to the 1225 people stationed on the island, but since he works 13 hour days, six days a week, Lusich said he finds little time for play.

A bowling alley, an Olympic-sized swimming pool and an outdoor theater are among the facilities available to the men and women on Johnston. College courses also are available through Central Texas Community College.

Watersports, including scuba diving and snorkeling, are popular activities in the equatorial waters that surround the island, Lusich said.

The athletic 26-year-old has excelled at softball on the island; he was selected recently to the Military All-Star Team for the Western Pacific Military Command.

The divorced father of a two-year-old daughter confessed that there is one thing in short supply on the island.

"There are only about a hundred women," he revealed. "That's the only thing I can't have sent out."

Lusich, a former Bay High tennis player, credits the Army with having changed his life.

"My way of looking at things changed a lot. When I went in I thought there was nothing for me in civilian life. It was just a way for me to get away from things. But now I realize I can handle anything," he said.

"I went in with my eyes closed. I thought I would stay in a short while. Now I will stay as long as they will let me."

"The military will teach you how to have a safe, responsible life. It will teach you how to lead people and not to fall into peer pressure."

"It has the best job security in the world," he said. "Even if you don't make it a career, you can go in and get a job skill. I think everyone should have to serve at least two years."

"Chief Murphy told me about the Army. He said it was a good move. He pointed me in the right direction. He's a good man; he has been instrumental in my life. I look up to him quite a lot," he said.

Lusich said he hopes to become a warrant officer and would like to serve in the Army until eligible for retirement. But in the mean time he will find himself on Johnston Atoll.

Easter egg safety

Easter signals that the long days of winter are officially over. For children, it seems an Easter egg hunt, finding brightly colored eggs hidden in the most difficult spot. Let the hunt begin and along with it, food safety.

There is concern that salmonella bacteria may possibly be transmitted from the chicken to the egg. While this risk is extremely small, eggs are a perishable food and should be treated as such—even for an Easter egg hunt.

Always use grade AA or A eggs with clean, uncracked shells that are stored under refrigeration in the grocery store. Once at home, refrigerate eggs in their original carton immediately.

Cook eggs thoroughly until both the yolk and white are firm in order to kill any bacteria that may be present.

Avoid keeping eggs out of the refrigerator for more than two hours. This includes the time for preparing to cook, cooling, drying, hiding, hunting and eating. Hard-cooked eggs hidden for an Easter egg hunt must either follow this two-hour limit or not be eaten.

Eggs can be cooked, dyed and refrigerated for three to four days either prior to or following the hunt.

Keep Easter egg safety in mind, and have a safe and happy Easter.

COOKING UP A STORM

By Katy McGuire
Caire

The traditional dishes of Easter, the oldest Christian celebration, are deep-rooted in the heritage of the peoples of the world.

The ancient Jewish custom was to sacrifice the paschal lamb, and from this came our custom of serving lamb at Easter in various ways, leg of lamb, chops and such.

And, the Easter ham tradition, star of many a Southern table not only at Easter time but throughout the year, had its roots also in the pre-Christian era in connection with welcoming the arrival of Spring with feasting and celebration.

And, so lamb and the pig—the ham—share honors at Easter time, along with Easter eggs and other symbols of the festive season.

Since ham is my preference, I'll probably be baking a ham, or a butt or shank half, embellished with pineapple slices and cherries, brown sugar-mustard-topping or glaze, well splashed with burgundy wine or other spirits, and carved with finesse—not mine, that of the offspring—at the dinner table.

Or, I may just cook up

STUFFED HAM SLICES
If you don't want all that ham on hand, or if yours is a small family, or just a couple or whatever, or even just one-at-table, why not observe the Easter ham tradition on a smaller and just as tasty scale?

2 ham slices, approximately half-inch thick

2 cups (from 4 or so slices) soft bread cubes

1/4 cup firmly packed brown sugar

1/2 cup raisins

Dash of dry mustard, or bit of prepared mustard, according to your taste

1/2 cup melted butter or margarine

Cloves, as desired

Several slices canned pineapple, optional

Mix the bread cubes, sugar, raisins, butter and mustard together. Place one ham slice in a baking dish, and spoon the stuffing over it. Top with the second ham slice and insert whole cloves around the outer edges of the top slice. Arrange pineapple slices over the top ham slice, reserving the juice for basting.

Bake, uncovered, at 300 degrees for an hour and a half, or a bit more or less, as needed. Drip pineapple juice and perhaps a little red wine over during the baking time. Garnish with parsley. (Six to eight servings)

For a tangier stuffing or "dressing" as we call it down South—and, more to my taste, by the way—make up a dressing of bread cubes or crumbs, along with the mustard, generous dashes of black and cayenne pepper and Tabasco, a bit of chopped onion, an egg or so to bind it all together, or whatever, and spread this on the lower ham slice.

And, let's not forget the picnic hams—they're tasty, also—and just now, when everyone else is splurging on Easter hams, you might find a special buy! I like to have a picnic ham cut in half (by the butcher, not by me). Then I simmer the ham and keep the shank half for jambalaya or stir-fry dishes or whatever, and bake the butt half—quite tasty and a boon to the budget!

P.S. For an Easter—or any other time—present for cooks or cookbook readers—why not try the recipes in Katy's Cookbook—Cooking Up A Storm, available at Bookends, 111 Hwy. 90, Bay St. Louis, just on the Bay side of the bridge; Toll House Gifts, at the Pass Christian side of the bridge, or at other area bookstores—or from Katy McGuire Caire, 413 Livingston, Pass Christian, MS 39571—price, $3.50—you'll enjoy!

GOOD FOOD BUYS

Poultry makes economical meals for family

Which came first, the chicken or the egg? Who cares. This biological riddle has produced more for the food industry than most could ask for and the phenomenon continues to grow. After years of lagging behind, the chicken has not only crossed the road but the entire poultry category has moved into the speed lane.

In 1987, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Americans ate 77.8 pounds of poultry and 73.4 pounds of beef. Poultry now accounts for more than one-third of total meat consumption (red meat and poultry together).

This one-third share compares to less than one-fifth during the 1950s and less than one-fourth in the 1970s. It is predicted that by the end of the decade poultry likely will represent well over 40 percent of the red meat/poultry category, or even as high as 45 percent, if the industry continues to make the dramatic gains experienced in the last three years.

There are many reasons why poultry has gained so much popularity. It's a very diet-conscious product—low in fat. It is cheaper to produce, making it a very economical product for consumers.

The National Broiler Association reports that a three-ounce serving of whole chicken contains 134 calories, 4.1 grams of total fat and 22.7 grams of protein. In short, poultry is a healthy and inexpensive item.

Retail prices for chicken today are less than one-third the price during the 1950s when prices were adjusted for inflation.

Along with poultry staples—chicken and turkey—exotic birds such as quail, pheasant, duck and others are winging their way into retail stores and on menus.

Duck seems to be one of the leading exotic birds sold throughout the year. According to the National Duckling Association, the U.S. produces nearly 23 million head of duckling and is gaining.

However, with all the emphasis on poultry, the meat industry is concentrating on producing leaner cuts, and low calorie and low fat preparation methods. In fact, steak houses are booming right now in New York and around the country.

While the poultry industry continues in the fast lane the only thing that might stand in its way is greed. As companies diversify and add different lines, increasing variety and productivity, the problem of inspection magnifies. Within recent years salmonella has become a very real problem. Or has it?

The problem is diminishing, as the industry takes preventive means to educate the public on how to prevent salmonella from occurring. While you don't hear that much about salmonella, the industry isn't ignoring the problem. It's definitely thinking about it. Salmonella is a major concern of the industry.

It's also a major concern of government, as the food and Drug Administration emphasizes the need for a nationwide testing program. The program, although voluntary by state, could be made mandatory if necessary.

Consumers also play a major role in providing safe poultry on the table. Poultry is a perishable product and requires proper care from the market to the home kitchen. Refrigerate promptly and use within two days, or prepare for freezing and store in the home freezer for three to six months.

Always cook poultry well done and practice cleanliness in all preparation methods. Never leave it at room temperatures for several hours. Follow special instructions on packages of poultry products for best results and most of all enjoy a variety of poultry and all lean meats. In many instances it's the quality of the product that is harmful and not the product itself.

Atwater featured speaker at Republican Fund Dinner

Republican National Committee Chairman Lee Atwater will be on hand when Mississippi Republicans hold their annual United Republican Fund Dinner in Jackson Friday night, April 7.

Atwater's visit highlights the party's push to "take the Republican Party to the grass-roots," according to State Party Chairman Evelyn W. McPhail of Bay St. Louis.

"We're expecting a record turnout this year," McPhail said, "our party is growing by leaps and bounds at the grass-roots level, and we're moving full-steam ahead toward a true two-party state."

The dinner will take place at the Ramada Renaissance Hotel in Northeast Jackson, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

According to McPhail, the dinner will be one of several Republican events this year that will enable Mississippians to meet national leaders.

"We are delighted to have Lee Atwater coming to Mississippi," she said, "He fully recognizes the importance of Mississippi in the Republican South and wants to work with us as we continue our unprecedented growth at the local level."

Further information about the dinner may be obtained through the state Republican Headquarters in Jackson at 948-5191.

Cancer research booklet outlines alcohol, cancer link

It's only common sense not to drink and drive, but a new booklet from the American Institute for Cancer Research suggests that drinking without thinking may be almost as dangerous.

The institute's booklet, "Alcohol and Cancer Risk: Make the Choice for Health," does not advocate avoiding all alcoholic drinks. However, it does emphasize practicing moderation for those who do decide to drink.

It also makes clear that studies have shown the possibility of increased cancer risk seems to accompany drinking alcoholic beverages.

Research is currently only in the preliminary stages of understanding how alcohol affects cancer risk and the cancer process, but there are several studies which have shown that excessive alcohol consumption can greatly increase cancer risk, and that even moderate or light drinking may bring some increased risk.

Research has not shown that alcohol causes cancer, but rather that it seems to be a factor which may interfere with the body's natural defenses.

Studies have shown that heavy drinking, defined as getting 30 to 50 percent of one's calories from alcohol for ten years or more, may increase the risk of liver cancer by 400 percent.

For heavy drinkers who smoke, the increase for liver cancer is as much as 1,400 percent. Excessive drinking of alcohol, which supplies "empty" calories containing little or no nutritional value, often also replaces good nutritional practices, another factor which can increase cancer risk.

An area of concern for many women, according to this new booklet, is the possibility that even moderate drinking may increase the risk for breast cancer.

While there have been conflicting reports from various studies regarding the link between alcohol and breast cancer, some research has found that even as little as a half a drink per day may increase breast cancer risk by 30 percent.

The Institute advises women to consider carefully this increased risk for one of the leading types of cancer in this country.

American Institute for Cancer Research is one of the nation's foremost research and education organizations in the field of diet and cancer.

Through the funding of cancer research, and through education programs which reach millions of Americans, the institute works to reduce cancer risk through practical dietary change.

A free copy of the booklet, "Alcohol and Cancer Risk," may be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed, business size envelope to the American Institute for Cancer Research, Dept. AC, Washington, D.C. 20069.

Wild turkeys

Research helps hold balance between survival and habitat

Mississippi may not be at the top of many lists, but when it comes to turkey populations and good turkey hunting, Mississippi ranks among the top three states in the nation.

From an estimated population of only 3,000 to 4,000 birds in the early 1900s to about 400,000 of the majestic birds in the state today, the Eastern species of wild turkey has made a dramatic comeback.

Thanks to the efforts of the Mississippi Department of Wildlife Conservation, dedicated wildlife biologists and concerned sportsmen and landowners, wild turkeys can be found and hunted in most areas of the state.

In 1977, 35,700 Mississippians hunted wild turkey in the state. By 1987, that number almost doubled to 65,722 turkey hunters with an estimated harvest of 59,241 male turkeys.

"Turkeys are more abundant in the Delta areas of the state, along the levee of the Mississippi River," said Dr. George Hurst, wildlife professor at Mississippi State University, and project leader of the Mississippi Cooperative Wild Turkey Project.

"From central Mississippi south to the Coast are excellent turkey populations. We have some social problems in Northeast Mississippi that are keeping us from establishing good turkey populations," Hurst said. "We only put turkeys in this part of the state if we can get protection for them."

"It is not dramatic right now. Turkeys are gaining and losing at about the same rate," Hurst said. Research helps monitor these changes and their impact on the turkeys.

Maintaining and increasing wild turkey populations also are the goals of the National Wild Turkey Federation, a sponsor of wild turkey research.

Grady Graham of Starkville, the northern director for the 2,000-member state WTF, explained the federation's goals as providing a safe and plentiful hunting environment.

"We conduct hunter education programs, hunter tactic seminars, raise money for research and help with the trap and transfer program, among other programs," Graham said. "We have a state federation and eight local chapters and are currently establishing three more local chapters."

The first 1989 turkey season is March 18 through April 3. The second season opens April 5 and closes May 1. Hunters are allowed to kill two male turkeys per season and three per licensed year.

As with other types of hunting, hunters may begin 30 minutes before sunrise until 30 minutes after sunset.

The 1988 hunting season proved disappointing for many hunters due to prolonged drought that resulted in a depressed mating season with very little gobbling.

This year, Hurst expects hunting conditions to be better and estimates there is a good supply of mature gobblers.

As for where to hunt—Hackett recommended contacting the state's wildlife management areas, or obtaining permission from timber companies and private landowners.

MISSISSIPPI'S WILD TURKEYS

A Four-part Series

COUNTY AGENT NOTES

By Lee Taylor

VEGETABLE PLANTING

Driving throughout the county, I see many garden areas ready for planting. Spring is really in the air and most gardeners are getting anxious to plant something. Personally, I like to plant on Good Friday. Considering the late cold spells we have been having, it seems to me this is a safe date.

Tomatoes are the most popular vegetable. Some varieties that have done well are Celebrity, President, Better Boy and Creole.

We continue to have problems with bacterial wilt year in and year out with tomatoes. There is no cure for this disease. It is caused by a bacteria and our fungicides just won't work. It you have had plants that wilted almost overnight with green tomatoes on the vine, chances are it is bacterial wilt. My recommendation is that you move your garden location if you want tomatoes.

Sweet corn has become a popular crop once again. One reason for this is the many super sweet varieties that are now available. Choices that have performed well in Hancock County include Merit, Funk's G-90, Silver Queen and Truck-er's Favorite.

FARMERS MARKET

The Farmers Market in Bay St. Louis will be open again this summer and will feature fresh vegetables and other items. It is good to visit with the producers and obtain information concerning his or her produce.

A new Farmers Market system is planned again this year for the Biloxi area. This market will be located at the Edgewater Mall and only home-grown produce will be sold. Another market will open in the Gulfport area and will be for farmers only.

PRESCRIBED BURNING

Fire can be a very effective tool for timber owners. If fire is misused, it can cause a disaster. Before you burn, you must contact the Mississippi Forestry Commission Tower to let them know you plan to burn.

At various times no burning is allowed due to dangerous weather conditions. A couple of weekends ago, a record number of acres was burned in Harrison and Jackson counties due to wild fires. Remember, if your fire gets away from you, you are liable for damages and for the cost of extinguishing the fire.

ON ETV

FOREST REBUILDER

Dan Janzen doesn't believe in doing things on a small scale, as evidenced by his latest project—building an entire forest from scratch.

Janzen is an architect of the outdoors, one of tropical biology's most prominent theorists and educators, and a maverick. Janzen's newest compulsion is to bring back the remnants of a Costa Rican forest.

The stories of Dan Janzen and others who are working to preserve Earth's challenged species are highlighted in "Life in the Balance," the next episode of The Infinite Voyage series. The program airs at 8 p.m. March 29, followed by a broadcast on select commercial stations and nationally on cable the week of April 2.

The 280-square-mile area Janzen is restoring was a tropical dry forest centuries ago. Early settlers to Costa Rica were drawn to this particular type of forest because of its vast selection of habitats and the ease with which it could be cleared. Each year they burned more land, clearing the way for herds of cattle.

Today, only two percent of the dry forest remains in its original form, thus earning it the distinction of being one of the most endangered ecosystems on earth.

Farm program signup underway

The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service is currently accepting applications for the 1989 feed grain, wheat, cotton and rice acreage reduction programs. The regular signup period will end April 14, 1989.

Pearl River-Hancock County ASCS official Franklin A. Gennin said the acreage reduction programs will help maintain a better balance between supply and demand. "All farmers with an established crop acreage base are eligible to participate in the voluntary programs."

Gennin said farm program participants will be eligible for price support loans and deficiency payments. "At signup, they may receive advance deficiency payments in cash for wheat, feed grains, upland cotton and rice," he said.

The advance payments will be limited to the farmer's intended program acreage.

The 1989 acreage reduction program requirements are 10 percent for wheat, corn, sorghum and barley, 5 percent for oats and extra long staple cotton, and 25 percent for upland cotton and rice.

"We encourage all producers to study the programs and consider the benefits in relation to their farm operations," the ASCS official said.

State farm programs received $1.5 billion

Senator Thad Cochran says more than $1.53 billion in federal funds went into Mississippi's agricultural economy in 1988.

The senator, ranking member of the Appropriations panel on Agriculture and Rural Development, said the money included a wide range of USDA programs as well as crop deficiency payments and disaster relief to farmers.

Cochran said the report he received from USDA also showed the state was expected to receive about $53.3 million more in FY 1989 than last year.

"This clearly shows that agriculture is a major factor in our state's economy, and that our farm programs make a significant contribution to Mississippi's economic well-being," Cochran said.

During 1988, a total of $890.5 million for Mississippi involved a wide range of USDA programs, including soil conservation, forestry, the Extension Service, agricultural research, food and nutrition, rural electrification, crop insurance, rural housing, water and sewer systems, and farm loans.

Also, USDA reported that crop payments amounted to $621 million, while the conservation reserve program accounted for about $22 million. Emergency disaster loans administered by the Farmers Home Administration amounted to over $2.8 million, the agency said.

USDA said the $1.53 billion total was for the 1988 fiscal year, which ended last Sept. 30.

The agency said the $890.5 million figure for various programs was expected to increase to over $943.7 million by the end of FY 1989.

OPEN 6 AM-10 PM 7 DAYS

The other day I had a customer complain about my po-boys. He said that we make them too big and that he couldn't eat it all. He saved some for lunch the next day and still threw some away. Then, he complained that I wasn't charging enough for my po-boys. Well, all I can say is you can't please everyone.

We have been very busy since St. Patrick's Parade. The weather has been nice-hopefully this will last awhile. We are expanding the menu and will be adding a couple of new dinners. Salads also will be added. We have already added a chicken breast on bun.

This will be the last week for our Lent specials. Crabs are starting to come, and crawfish are getting bigger.

ST. ANN CHURCH NEWS

A thought for meditation from our pastor, Father Justin Furman, ST.

"How much is lost to those who have no faith! To them human existence is a puzzle, and men's wanderings on this planet are a delirium. A man without faith cannot understand himself."

Within, he detects the urge for happiness, a great happiness, or a happiness that none of his creature servants, animate or inanimate, can satisfy.

He becomes a burden to himself, mocked by his desire for happiness that the natural cannot achieve. Dejection and despair taunt him into the belief that it would be better if he had never been born and that self-destruction is the only way to end his misery."

Vlahos seeks reelection to circuit judge position

Judge Kosta N. Vlahos, the incumbent senior Circuit Court judge for Hancock, Harrison and Stone counties, has announced his candidacy for reelection.

Judge Vlahos has served as Circuit Court judge since 1979. He was assistant district attorney for more than four years and for 12 years prior to that had a very active private law practice.

He is a graduate of Tulane University in New Orleans where he was elected vice president of the School of Business Administration and received his BBA in business administration. Judge Vlahos earned his juris doctorate in 1966 from Ole Miss.

He is a 1979 graduate of the National Judicial College and annually participates in the continuing judicial programs at the Mississippi Judicial College.

Judge Vlahos became senior judge when the late Judge Ruble Griffin was elected to the State Supreme Court. In addition to his regular duties as judge, as the senior Circuit Court judge of this district, he administers the docket and court terms. He also has the responsibility of assigning all court cases in Hancock, Harrison and Stone counties.

He is the first Circuit Court judge to achieve participation in the Harrison County Circuit Court budgetary process. As a result, the taxpayers will save more than $100,000 annually in attorney's fees on indigent cases without cutting back on the quality of legal services for the poor.

"A federal court has called this special election for April 4 which gives me only 35 days to campaign in Hancock, Harrison and Stone counties. Because of our busy court docket, I cannot reschedule the terms of court to allow the incumbent judges time to campaign for our reelection. I hope that the voters will understand that with this time limitation, I will not be able to visit and ask personally for your vote," stated Judge Vlahos.

He and his wife Kally, a businesswoman and homemaker, have three children, Nicholas 10, Stacey 9, and Anthony 5.

THE SEA COAST ECHO—THURSDAY, MARCH 23, 1989-1B

SECTION B

Pony Club's Dressage Rally nets honors for John Bezou

John E. Bezou Jr., 13, seventh grade student at St. Stanislaus and son of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Bezou Sr. of Bay St. Louis, competed March 11 and 12 at the United States Pony Club's South Region Dressage Rally in Alpharetta, Ga. John is a member of Jump for Joy Pony Club in Bay St. Louis/Pass Christian area and rode as a member of a combined team with Southeast Mississippi Pony Club from Ocean Springs.

The team of four riders and one stable manager, ranging in age from 8-14 placed second out of nine teams from Louisiana, Alabama, Georgia and the Florida Panhandle. The team also placed first in the coveted stable management award.

Each rider performed two set dressage rides and one freestyle musical ride.

The teams are judged throughout the two-day duration of the rally on the care of their horses and equipment and in addition to the mounted phase of competition there is also a written exam of each competitor's horse knowledge.

John, of Pass Christian, is a pupil of Auriol Hessemer of Bay St. Louis at her riding stables and has been riding under Mrs. Hessemer's instruction for three years.

He competed on Royal Heir, a 12-year-old bay gelding owned by Ellen Eagen of Bay St. Louis and stabled at Mrs. Hessemer's facility.

Hessemer coached all the riders on the SEMPC team in preparation for the dressage rally.

JOHN E. BEZOU

Time Out

By Dena Bisnette

This week, The Sea Coast Echo is introducing "Time Out" as a new feature of our sports section.

We hope it will appeal to everyone who follows sports in Hancock County, from the moms who chauffeur the little guys off to the soccer games to the folks looking for news of the local boys making it good at college.

I invite anyone with sports or sports-related announcements to call me at 467-5474 so I can get it in this column. The deadline is noon on Tuesdays.

Lis Lagarde at Tennis World in Diamondhead says the facility's first seniors' tournament in about a decade will be April 1 and 2. The tournament, which is called the first annual Seafood Jamboree, will include doubles and mixed doubles competition. Anyone interested in entering can contact Lagarde at 255-2525, extension 300.

Congratulations to Auriol Hessemer of Bay St. Louis and her horse, Scimitar.

Hessemer, who teaches dressage and jumping at Theriot's in Pass Christian, rode her black anglo-arab gelding in three international-level dressage classes and brought home three blue ribbons from the Happy Valley Horse Trials and Dressage Show at Hattiesburg this weekend.

Hessemer and some of her students will compete in two shows next month, the Longleaf Show at Covington, La., on April 2 and the Foxview Show at Abita Springs, La., on April 15 and 16.

The Bay High Tigers baseball team will play St. John at home Tuesday at 5:30. Their first division game is Friday at Wiggins. The game against Stone County is scheduled to begin at 5:30 p.m. In addition, the Tigers will travel to Pass Christian Saturday for a 2 p.m. game.

The Hancock County Recreation Association is sponsoring Community Day at Valena C. Jones gymnasium Saturday and Sunday, April 1 and 2, beginning at Sunday will feature an afternoon of basketball tournaments. Both for the sale of items benefitting various causes, children's games and entertainment will be featured on both days.

Donnie Speights of Bay St. Louis, a cheerleader at Mississippi College, will travel to Sea World at San Antonio, Texas, April 8. He and the rest of his 14-member squad will compete in the Pepsi/Mary Kay Cosmetics College Cheerleading National Championship.

Mississippi College's cheerleaders were chosen as finalists from about 200 entries and they'll be on ESPN later next month when the finals are aired.

Hurricanes, Falcons, Sweepers take Bay Youth Soccer titles

Bay Area Youth Soccer is now completing the final phase of the spring season. After nine weeks of league competition, the final standings have basically been determined for all teams going to district playoffs and only fun tournaments remain before the recreation season ends in two weeks.

Congratulations are in order for all the teams this season for a very fine effort. Special congratulations should be paid to all of the teams that are going to district playoffs.

Under-10
In Under-10 play, Coach Demboski's Jaguars defeated Coach Peoples' Bad Blues by a score of 2-0.

Speights to compete in finals

Jay Albritton of Quitman, Bubba Avdoyan of Gulfport, David Hickman and Lezlin Walker of Jackson, Darryl Longabaugh and Debby Oakley of Clinton, Ed Moore of Moselle, Donnie Speights of Bay St. Louis, Jill Hasty of Huntsville, Ala., Kim Ketchum of Ridge-land, Rebe Kahlessem of Vicksburg, and Jodi McPhail of Magee are the members of the Mississippi College cheerleading squad who will be finalists in the Pepsi/Mary Kay Cosmetics College Cheerleaders National Championship.

The 14-member squad, chosen from a field of 200 entries, will compete at Sea World in San Antonio, Texas, April 8. The final competition will be aired by the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network (ESPN) later that month.

"This year we'll select a winner from Division IA, Division I, and Division II," said Jeff Webb, president of the Memphis-based Universal Cheerleaders Association, administrators of the annual competition.

The championship, now in its seventh year, showcases the most outstanding squads in the U.S. based on enthusiasm, timing, rhythm, athletic ability and crowd response.

Webb said almost 600,000 students from junior high school through college participate in the various aspects of cheerleading annually.

SSC falls to Laurel, 11-6

The St. Stanislaus Rock-A-Chaw baseball team dropped an 11-6 decision to the Laurel Golden Tornadoes in baseball action last Friday.

Laurel, the No. 2 ranked team in the state, scored three unearned runs in the first inning, while the Rock-A-Chaws fought back with two earned runs in the bottom of the first.

Greg Schruft pitched a solid ballgame for the Rock-A-Chaws, but errors by St. Stanislaus led to their downfall.

"You can't allow a good ballclub like Laurel to score seven unearned runs while you commit six errors and still think you're going to win the ballgame," said Coach Mike Gemelli.

"We simply did not have our concentration focused on this game," said Coach Gemelli. "There were some bright spots, however, but overall I don't think our players were pleased with their performance."

The Rock-A-Chaws did close the gap to 9-6 in the sixth inning, while leaving two men on base. Two walks and a single by Laurel in the top of the seventh accounted for their final two runs.

"Even though we had nine base hits and played fairly good defensive baseball, the score-board read 11-6 when it was all over, and that's what counts," said Coach Gemelli.

St. Stanislaus was to begin District 4A play this past Tuesday, but the game was rained out. On Friday, the Rock-A-Chaws host a strong Hancock North Central team at the SSC diamond with game time set at 1 p.m.

Last week the Hawks shut out the St. John Eagles, 9-0.

The Planning and Zoning Commission will hold a public hearing April 12, 1989 at 7 p.m. in the Council Chambers of City Hall to consider the application by Pamela Webb Citterton to have property owned by her located at 179 Paradise Lane rezoned from the present R-1 classification (Single Family Residential) to MO-1 (Medical Office). Any additional information regarding this matter may be had by calling the Municipal Clerk's office at 467-9000.

All interested parties are urged to attend.

Gardening: An increasingly popular part of the American life

With something for everyone, gardening is fun for all ages

Gardening is one of the most popular American pastimes. Its appeal transcends all barriers, for it is accessible to nearly every member of our society regardless of class, income, education or skill level. Indeed, gardens and gardening are part of our culture, figuring in religion, literature, legend and myth.

According to surveys, 78 percent of all American households are involved in one or more forms of gardening, including lawn care and raising houseplants.

And, many of those who don't garden enjoy visiting parks and botanical gardens. The New York Botanical Gardens reports that, in 1987, more than 100,000 people visited its conservatory. Many thousands more visited the grounds to admire the plants and flowers or simply to stroll, read or nap in this lovely oasis in the midst of big-city noise and crowds.

But urban dwellers don't just visit gardens; they have gardens of their own on rooftops or in windowsills. Or, they share a community garden, often a vacant lot transformed from an eyesore to a thing of beauty by the efforts of neighbors working side by side.

Residents of the suburbs and more rural areas usually have outdoor gardens in which they take great pride and which supply their homes with flowers and their tables with fresh vegetables and fruit. Or, their gardens exist solely for decorative purposes, as quiet and peaceful places where one can relax in the evening after a hard day at work.

Though gardening is becoming more popular every year, it obviously is not a passing fad. Probably very few people garden just because "everyone else is doing it." But why do people garden?

Gardening offers many rewards, both physical and spiritual. On the practical side, many people enjoy the sense of self-sufficiency which comes from being able to grow some of their own food.

A home vegetable garden can be very economical. And, as everyone knows, homegrown vegetables always taste better than those from any other source! Plus, canning and preserving allow the gardener to enjoy the fruits of his or her labors even in the middle of winter.

Other gardeners wish to surround their homes with beautiful plants, flowers and ornamental shrubs. Some express an artistic bent through their careful arrangements of plants and shrubbery, perhaps including such features as arbors, garden pools, rose-covered archways and raised beds.

A garden is always a work in progress, as plants pass through various stages of maturity and react to the change of seasons, and as the gardener makes adjustments over time to create an ever more pleasing design.

Gardening is also a good form of mild exercise, requiring plenty of lifting, bending and stretching. Its both relaxing and enjoyable, a great way to escape from stress and tension.

And, as our society becomes ever more complex and mechanized, more and more people turn to gardening as a way to re-establish a link with nature.

Time spent working in the garden can also be a time for the whole family (or neighborhood, in a community garden) to work together, dividing chores and sharing the pride in the results.

Most children love helping in the garden. One reason may be that it gives them an excuse to get dirty! But gardening can also teach them responsibility, especially if they are given their own plants or their own small section of the garden to tend.

Sunflowers are a delight for young children and a chance for them to witness the miracle of life and growth, as the sunflower grows from a tiny seed to a towering plant with its huge yellow flower, which always looks towards the sun. Hardy vegetables such as radishes are also good choices for a child's garden.

Chances are that a child who learns to love gardening will enjoy it throughout life. And, as more Americans discover the joys of gardening, it is to be hoped that our society as a whole will develop a greater appreciation of nature and a stronger desire to protect the environment for future generations.

The urge to create, to nurture, to see the results of hard work and tender, loving care—this may be the main reason why people garden, though certainly it is far from being the only reason.

Gardening is one activity which truly is adaptable to almost any lifestyle, no matter how much or how little time, space and money one has. It will surely continue to grow in popularity.

The Beginning of a well-designed yard and a beautiful garden is the plan you develop with our help. The rewards are great, it's challenging and fun and as easy as 1-2-3!

Automatic underground sprinkler system will save you much time, water and money

You'll save three ways when you install a do-it-yourself automatic underground sprinkler system in your lawn and garden.

Once it's installed, you'll save time by not having hoses to move all around the yard or having neighbors take care of the watering when you go on vacation. Most homeowners find automatic systems save water and money on the water bill by taking the guesswork out of watering. You'll also save money by installing a system yourself and, in fact, it adds value to the home.

An automatic underground sprinkler system can be installed in an existing or new landscape. A typical system will serve lawns, shrubs, trees and flower beds by using a combination of sprinkler heads, PVC or poly pipes and fittings, valves, safe low voltage wiring and an electronic timer.

While the watering cycle and a consistent amount of water for each area is controlled by the timer, you are still in control. If it rains or you want to work or play in the yard, you simply push a button to delay the watering cycle. Changing the frequency and length of watering time to meet seasonal needs is also done by simply resetting the timer.

Building a system requires careful planning, but the reward is a permanent solution for your landscape watering problems. GardenAmerica Corp., manufacturer of the Lawn Genie system, recommends to-it-yourselfers allow two to four days to plan and install a system. Planning guides will take you step-by-step through the process.

Plan the system by first gathering information on water service lines and water pressure. Using the planning guide graph paper, draw a detailed landscape to show lawn, shrubs, trees and any other areas to be included.

Then the circuits, valves and sprinkler heads are determined. A variety of sprinkler head patterns is available to suit the size and shape of the landscape. For example, one circuit can be dedicated to shrubs, another to flower beds and others to the lawn.

Selection of a timer will depend on the complexity of the system and functions desired. There are basic timers with single program capabilities and sophisticated electronic timers with multiple programming capabilities.

Next comes digging trenches about six inches deep, either by hand with a spade or with a trenching machine. Pipes are then connected to the valve assembly and water source.

Wires connect valves to the timer, which is then plugged into a standard electric outlet. In areas where pipes freeze, drain valves should be installed to drain all standing water from the system at low points in each circuit.

Flushing the lines, "fine-tuning" the sprinkler heads and then covering the trenches complete the job. Other than occasionally checking the system, you'll eliminate the watering chores and will enjoy the freedom of automation in the garden.

THIS IS A BEFORE PICTURE OF A YARD with an improperly placed tree and a necessary but unsightly garage.

MIDWAY THROUGH LANDSCAPE REMODELING, important changes can be seen. In just one growing season, vines have been introduced to the side of the garage to help blend it into the overall landscape. A hedge has been established to provide both a screen and a breaking point in the yard, and the tree has been removed. Now in process is a new lawn which the homeowner stripped and is now seeding prior to seeding.

Earthworms are good for more than simply aerating the soil

What animal is earning a reputation as a fertilizer, garbage disposer and source of protein? According to International Wildlife magazine, the earthworm, of which there are some 3,000 species, will eat through all kinds of organic waste and recycle them as fertilizer.

In addition, for every 10 pounds of garbage that earthworms consume, they produce a pound of meat that tastes like chicken.

Although scattered tribes around the world have traditionally eaten worms, experts think it's unlikely the wormburger will ever replace the hamburger on our menus.

HOME & GARDEN

In spring, homeowners' fancies turn to thoughts of refurbishing

Spring is the perfect time for home repairs, spring cleaning

As the spring season approaches, schoolchildren and adults alike tend to get spring fever. The spring cleaning bug may soon follow. After taking a good look around your home, you may decide this spring is the perfect time for some home improvement. These improvements may range from simple repairs to major remodeling.

Before deciding to make major remodeling changes, inspect and evaluate your home. This also can help you catch small problems before they develop into irreparable damage. However, after adequately checking the old design of a room, you may decide only minor adjustments are necessary to create the look you desire.

Certain changes in your household or lifestyle may warrant changes in your home. For example, departures or additions to a family may make reorganization essential. You may want to convert a bedroom into a den, a basement into an apartment or add more bathrooms. If there has been a change in a family's lifestyle, such as an alteration in work habits, the house will have to fit the changes in living patterns.

Maybe you are working at home and need an office in the house. Or perhaps you have stopped working altogether to raise a family or take care of an elderly family member. In either case, the living area in your home will have to be enlarged or altered to accommodate more frequent use.

A change in affluence such as a larger income usually means more entertaining and the desire and ability to expand or add on to rooms meant to entertain guests.

A family may have acquired new interests such as gourmet cooking or health and fitness activities. This may call for kitchen expansion or conversion of a room into a spa. However, major remodeling is not the answer to every dissatisfaction you may have with your home.

It may be time for a fresh coat of paint, or new wallpaper, fixtures or carpeting.

You should not neglect the outside of your home. It may need a fresh coat of paint, a patio, new windows or new gutters. You even may consider installing a pool, hot tub or barbecue pit as the summer approaches!

Now is the ideal time to restructure the landscape in order to make it more pleasing to the eye and functional for outdoor fun and sports. Adding plants and flowers to a yard or garden is sure to add color and beauty to any home.

You also may want to start a vegetable garden at this time. If you live in an apartment, flower boxes or rooftop gardens are great for those green thumbs

If this is impossible, you can always make more elaborate changes to the inside of your apartment, since you will have more time and money to put toward the effort.

If you are planning on making the improvement yourself, make a list of the supplies and tools you will need to complete the job. A single trip to the lumberyard, hardware store or interior design store will be beneficial and time-saving. Make sure you buy enough of what you need to avoid multiple trips, frustration and exhaustion.

Know your limits and when a job is too big for you to handle. Don't be ashamed to turn a half-finished job over to a professional if it becomes too time-that don't have access to traditional gardens.

If you do live in an apartment, you probably don't have the same responsibilities for the outside of your dwelling. However, you may want to collaborate with your landlord to make any changes that you feel would improve the building.

consuming. Wallpapering and adding on an additional room require different amounts of energy and time.

Evaluate the situation to see whether it is better to do the work yourself or hand it over to someone else.

The best way to find a professional for your home improvement is by word of mouth. Ask people who have had work done on their homes if they were pleased with the quality and price of the work. Or, you may want to ask your local hardware store or lumberyard for recommendations.

Whether you do it yourself or have it done by a professional, improvements to your home are a pleasure to come home to and enjoyable to share with guests and family.

Orange-aid

There's a new killer chemical on the horizon, devastating to household pests but apparently safe for humans, animals and the environment. And, it smells great.

According to National Wildlife magazine, the magic ingredient is citrus oil from orange peels. Researchers have found it to be a valuable replacement for poison in killing houseflies, fleas and fire ants.

Tree value

Keep in mind that the trees that are dropping those leaves in your yard are also saving you money. National Wildlife magazine reports that trees may cut cooling costs 50 percent or more by shading a house from sunlight. And, come winter, trees may lower heating bills by as much as 15 percent by deflecting winter gusts.

(A) These recommendations are based on the assumption that no structural modifications are needed to accommodate the added insulation.
(B) R-value of full wall insulation, which is 3 1/4 inches thick, will depend on material used. Range is R-11 to R-13. For new construction, R-19 is recommended for exterior walls. Jamming an R-19 in a 3 1/4 inch cavity will not yield R-19.
(C) Insulate crawl space walls only if the crawl space is dry all year, the floor above is not insulated, and all ventilation to the crawl space is blocked. A vapor barrier (e.g., 4 or 6 mil polyethylene film) should be installed on the ground to reduce moisture migration into the crawl space.
(D) Thermal response of existing space for cooling benefits does not suggest additional insulation.
Note: For more information see: DOE Insulation Fact Sheet (DOE/CE-0180), U.S. Department of Energy, Technical Information Center, P.O. Box 62, Oak Ridge, TN 37830.

DOES YOUR INSULATION MEASURE UP to the U.S. Department of Energy's new recommendations? The table above reviews DOE's R-value recommendations for the country's various climates. To use the table, find your city or town within one of the climate zones on the map. Check the table to determine the insulation R-value recommended for your zone and your home's fuel. The figures refer to the total insulation R-values recommended for your ceilings/attics, floors and crawl spaces.

Off-the-wall reason for failing houseplants

Scientists at the University of Florida have found a real off-the-wall reason why some common houseplants mysteriously wither and die.

It seems that mercury added to some paints to retard mildew is highly toxic to some indoor plants.

Because of their sensitivity, such plants could prove useful for detecting low levels of toxic chemicals in the indoor environment.

Air plants absorb moisture

Sometimes called "air plants," Tillandsia plants absorb moisture and nourishment directly from rain and fog in the air through specialized scales on the surface of their leaves.

Lovely and easy to care for...

A rose for all seasons is a delight for gardeners and wildlife

By Craig Tufts

Rose is a rose is a rose...sometimes. For the wildlife gardener, the word rose brings to mind wonderfully scented, beautifully flowering mounds of lush green foliage sustained only through minute-by-minute fungicide applications—or that much maligned, wonderful habitat resource, the rampant multiflora.

The middle ground however, a floriferous, easy to care for, densely shrubby rose, is fairly barren. Yes, there are the rugosas and native species such as the prairie, swamp and pasture roses. They are not for everyone however. Rugosas are sometimes fussy and the natives are hard to come by.

A rose introduced in 1987 has changed this. An All-American rose selection, it offers lots of bloom over a period of months. It is very hardy, practically carefree, densely shrubby and bears heavy crops of hips through the fall and into the winter. This seeming miracle is the Bonica shrub rose.

What does this rose look like? Think of a multiflora which stays fairly compact, four feet high by five wide. Add hundreds of pink flowers per plant, each two to three inches in diameter, fully double and slightly fragrant. Frame the flower against deep green, glossy foliage. That's a rough sketch of the Bonica.

The Bonica may not be a breakthrough plant for rose breeders, but its introduction is very significant for residential and commercial landscapes.

It's the result of crosses—an unnamed seedling of a climber, the evergreen rose and a named rambler, Mlle. Martha Caron, pollinated by the well-known floribunda, Picasso.

The original cross was made by the French rose breeder, the House of Meiland. This new rose was tested for years here in the United States. It has flourished through severe winters, summer heat, drought and pestilence that would have killed lesser plants. The Conard-Pyle Company introduced this rose into the American horticultural trade.

For wildlife, this rose offers the cover density of the multiflora. In summer, the rose provides ideal nesting habitat for mockingbirds, song sparrows, cardinals and catbirds.

In winter, a grouping of three or more Bonicas placed near your bird feeders offers safe harbor for many species of songbirds waiting their turn for a sunflower, millet or niger seed snack.

The abundant flowers will attract nectar and pollen diners, which, in turn, will entice insect-eating birds.

The abundant half-inch long fruits or hips, the product of summer insect pollination, begin to color orange-red in September. They hold their color well, providing winter landscape interest. These fruits provide birds and mammals with food through January.

My own wildlife-attracting yard is beginning to burst at the seams. Bonica seems so good, however, that I know I'll find a spot for it. The birds will thank me in their own way.

As you visit your local garden center this spring and summer, look for this rose—then find a home for it in your landscape. You'll be glad you did.

Bay police officer tops Jackson academy class

BY DENA BISNETTE

Gus Aime loves being a police officer in his hometown of Bay St. Louis. To show it, he recently graduated at the top of his Jackson Police Training Academy class.

Aime, 24, is the first member of his department to be first overall in an academy class, topping the 35 graduates in his group in all three of the areas emphasized—academics, firearms and physical training.

Bay St. Louis' best previous showing was when Aime's fellow officer, Detective Tom Burleson, led his academy class in the firearms division.

Aime was one of 35 who finished the nine-week course, which started with an enrollment of 41. He was the only one from the Gulf Coast in his class.

He said the para-military training stressed being able to work together as a team. Most of the instructors, including a couple of attorneys who taught courses on criminal codes and on the liabilities involved in being a police officer, were active or former law enforcement officers.

"I believe the academy at Jackson is the toughest one in the state," Aime said. "The instructors were tough but I loved it. They taught us practical things, things you can really use."

One of his favorite courses was called "officer survival" and dealt with "tactics you would use to survive on the street, how to stay on your toes and not let apathy take over. We worked on things like use of cover, using weapons and weapon retention."

Aime described a typical rehearsal session with the instructor, W.T. Marsalis. A group of students was in a building; the situation was gang problems.

"The minute he (Marsalis) came in, the lights went out. We were silhouetted in the windows. Somebody down there could have shot at us," he explained.

Aime finished the nine weeks with a number of specialized certifications, including firearms, basic first aid, CPR and PR 24, which is a certification in the use of a side-handle baton when the officer is otherwise unarmed.

Physical training was tougher at the beginning of the class than it was as the nine weeks ended, but was responsible for the elimination of several people who could not qualify. Others were dropped for other reasons.

Aime decided to excel at the beginning.

"I did, not only for myself, but for (Bay Police Chief) Ray (Murphy), my family and my department. I have always strived for perfection since I was a little kid, and they put a lot of faith in me, sending me up there," he said.

"I didn't want to let them down." He has been home from Jackson a couple of weeks, but said, "I miss it now. I liked the discipli-line and the comraderie. It was just fun."

"The kind of friends you make there, you'll be friends forever. You live with them for nine weeks and you get close."

Aime, who joined Bay St. Louis Police Department in May 1986 as a reserve officer and has been a full-time officer for about a year, is one of the last in his department to graduate from a law enforcement training academy. Two more who have not been through the program are scheduled to go later this year.

Aime feels the academy's program makes an important contribution to police professionalism.

"Before minimum standards were required in law enforcement, you could get any farmer off the street, put him in a uniform and put a gun on him, and he was a policeman," he said.

"Now policemen are better educated, meet higher physical standards and are just generally more professional."

Aime is one of those more educated policemen. After graduating from St. Stanislaus, he attended Pearl River Junior College and eventually went to University of Southern Mississippi, where he received a bachelor's degree in criminal justice with minors in forensic science and business administration. He served an internship with the same department for which he now works.

He said he originally had no idea he wanted to be a policeman.

It dawned on Aime one day when he was sitting in a class at Pearl River and an instructor was taking a survey, asking his students what majors they intended to declare at university level.

"I was just there to play baseball. I mean, I was making good grades but as far as a major went, I hadn't thought about it much. I had no idea what to say."

"Then this girl I knew said 'criminal justice' and something just clicked. When he came to me, that's what I said. Later on, I got to looking at the catalogue, reading the course descriptions, and I liked it."

Aime eventually hopes to go into the investigative part of police work, but for now he patrols the road.

"I like working the road for now... It's like a fever," he said.

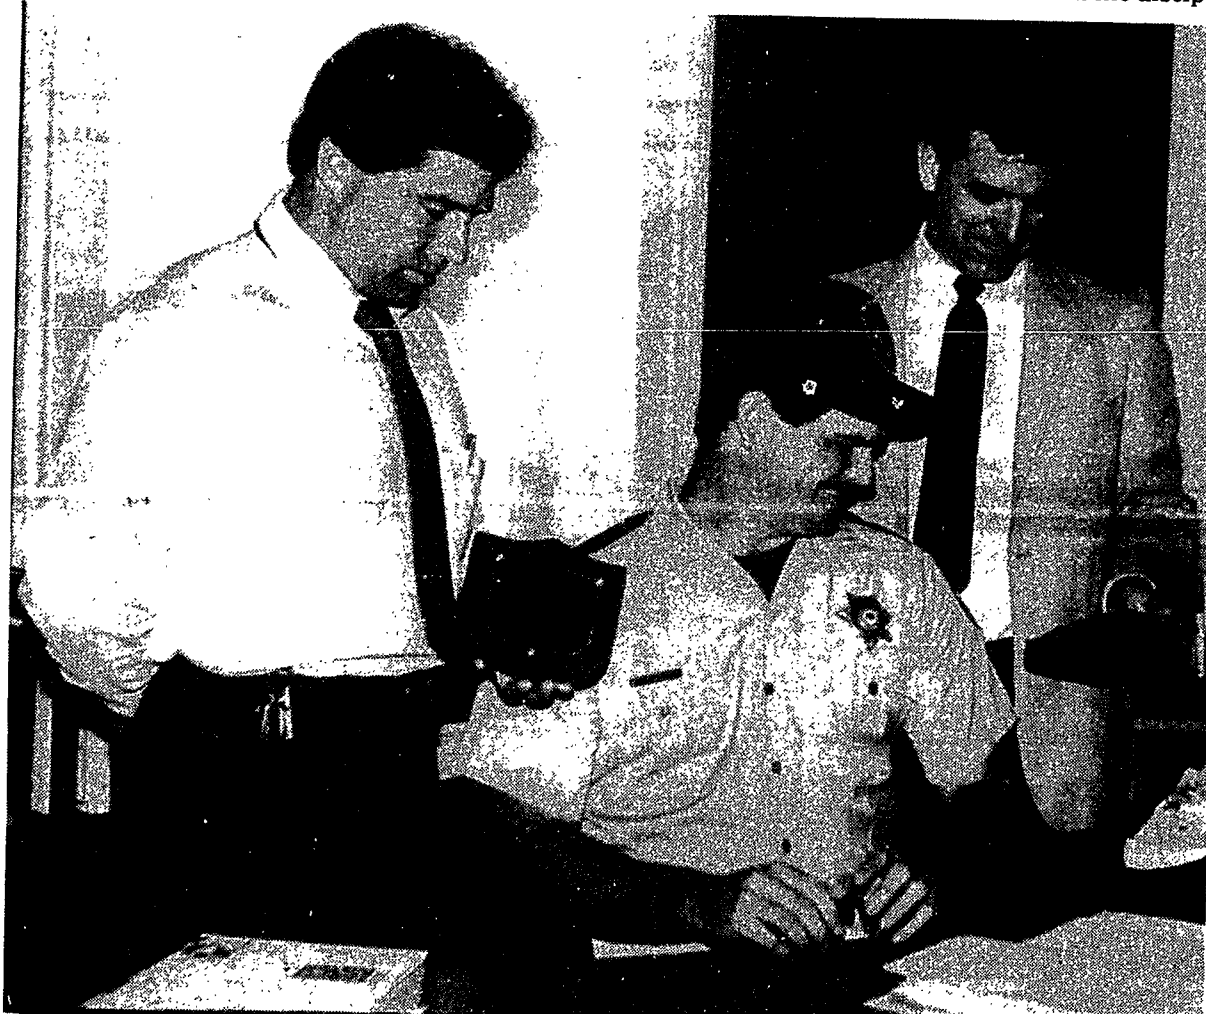

"I work the dog shift," he said, explaining that right now, that means 6 p.m. until 6 a.m. "I've been working nights since I got on the force and I'll probably still be on nights for a long time."

He said he does not know if he would continue police work if he had to leave Bay St. Louis. Although he loves his job, it means a lot to him to be able to work in his hometown.

In addition to patrolling the streets, Aime serves as a reserve officer with the Blue Lightning Strike Force and is a licensed scuba diver and a member of Hancock County Lawmen's Association.

He is married to Connie Duprey Aime and is son of Edmond V. Aime of Bay St. Louis and Janet Aime of Waveland. He and his wife are members of Our Lady of the Gulf Church.

BSL Little Theatre elects officers, directors plans comedy in May

The newly reorganized Bay St. Louis Little Theatre group has elected a board of directors and plans to produce its first play in May.

Board officers are Ed Craig of Pass Christian, president; John Holmes of Bay St. Louis, vice president; Carol Young of Waveland, secretary and Toni Handshoe of Bay St. Louis, treasurer.

Other board members are Joe Marchino, Alice Holmes, Pat Cucullu, Edith Back, Kitty Dougherty, Larry Heller, Lana Noonan and Lyla Hay Owen, all of Bay St. Louis; Ed Scanlan and Marie Bernard, both of Waveland; and Jackie Magee and Sandra Moncrief, both of Pass Christian.

Committee chairmen named at the board's first meeting are John Holmes, house; Lana Noonan, lobby; and Larry Heller and Lyla Hay Owen, publicity.

The first play selected for the season will be "The Odd Couple—the Female Version..." It is a delightful comedy by Neil Simon where there is scarcely a moment that is not hilarious. The performances will be May 18, 19 and 20. Rehearsals will start this week. Ed Scanlan will be the director.

Anyone interested in becoming a member of the Bay St. Louis Little Theatre group is requested to send $10 for each membership to the BSL Little Theatre, P.O. Box 342, Bay St. Louis, MS 39520.

We all know that eating less and exercising more are keys to successful weight loss, but in a society that places such great importance on food, it is often difficult to do.

"Many people approach dieting in the wrong way," said Dr. James Crittenden, diet and weight loss specialist with Hancock Medical Center. "Then when they are unsuccessful in losing weight, they become discouraged."

Dr. Crittenden emphasized that self-denial, fad diets and diet pills are not the answer. To achieve long-term results, he said, eating habits and the environmental factors which affect them must be looked at closely. When, where and what is eaten are all factors in weight management.

To lose weight and maintain a desired weight, the doctor suggests remembering the following tips:

* Eat slowly and chew food carefully.

* Always eat in the same place at home. Avoid eating in bed or while watching television.

* Find a hobby or activity that will keep you from binge eating when bored, angry or tired.

* Establish a routine eating schedule. Meals on the run usually result in higher caloric intakes.

* Never grocery shop on an empty stomach. Keep high-calorie impulse items out of shopping carts. If snacks are not purchased, they are not eaten.

* Do include "legal" snacks in the daily diet. Fresh fruits, vegetables and popcorn are filling and relatively low in calories.

* Avoid empty calorie beverages such as soft drinks and alcoholic beverages.

In addition to cutting back on caloric intake, look at ways to increase physical activity. A leisurely stroll through the neighborhood or along the beach may be relaxing, but to get the maximum benefits from an exercise program, Dr. Crittenden says that the body, heart and lungs need to work at a level high enough to raise the heart rate.

To monitor the effectiveness of exercise activity, measure the heart rate during or immediately after exercise. The following formula will help your heart work at 70 percent of its maximum training level: 200 minus person's age times .70 equals training heart rate.

"Approximately 3,500 calories must be burned to lose one pound," said Dr. Crittenden, "and an exercise routine should be scheduled three times weekly for approximately 30 minutes."

If a stationary bike is ridden for only 30 minutes, three days a week, approximately 1,050 calories are expended per week.

While exercise alone would result in the loss of only 1.3 pounds per month, the exercise combined with reduced caloric intake will ensure long-term success. Not only does exercise help control weight, it improves muscle tone, strengthens heart and lungs, and gives an energy boost.

Weight loss is never easy; but with a little bit of determination and a lot of support from friends and family, positive results can be achieved.

There were approximately 400 projects entered in the local science fair.

Participation in any Regional Mississippi Science Fair is limited to a maximum of three entrants in each of the Mississippi Science and Engineering Fair's categories.

All students who entered a project in the science fair received a first, second or third place ribbon. Regional Science Fair winners also received a trophy.

Although there is no regional competition for kindergarten and special education students, the science fair judges were very impressed with the projects. Each of the projects entered was awarded a first place ribbon.

WWII unit sets reunion

The 904th Field Artillery Battalion of the famed 79th Infantry Division of WWII will conduct its annual reunion in Cincinnati, Ohio July 1, 2, 3 and 4.

The battalion, after participating in the Normandy Invasion, was distinguished for conquering the Cherbourg Peninsula in addition to battle campaigns in Northern France, Rhineland, Central Europe and Ardennes-Alsace.

The 79th Division was known as the Lorraine Cross Division and was awarded the Distinguished Unit Citation of the Croix De Guerre for its assistance in combat to that country.

Duke Levy, now a resident of Diamondhead, who served with the battalion from its activation in June 1942 and throughout combat, is interested in getting this reunion notice to all former members of the 904th Battalion who reside in Mississippi and neighboring states.

He may be contacted at (601) 255-2715.

LEARNING IN AMERICA

Did you know that 75 percent of 11th grades cannot write well enough to adequately perform tasks required for success in academic studies, business or the professions? And that American corporations spend nearly $25 billion annually on remedial education?

"Learning in America," a new five-part series premiering at 9 p.m., Monday, March 27, on Mississippi ETV, examines the state of American education by blending extensive documentary reporting with interviews and discussions. It brings together many of the nation's best thinkers and prominent educators to debate how American schools should be reshaped to meet the challenges of the 21st century.

The first of these five programs, "The Real Competition," looks at our educational system in relation to America's economy. When it comes to preparing today's children for tomorrow's work force, many of our schools are failing. Faced with a shortage of skilled workers and declining productivity, American businesses are devoting more time and money into training their own employees, often in basic reading and writing skills.

By contrast, high school students in other countries, notably Japan, graduate with significantly more sophisticated math and science skills and are better prepared for employment. This episode on March 27 will go on location to schools throughout America and Japan to examine in detail these differences.

HMC film depicts 'Miracle of Life' filmed inside body

Where do babies come from? How does life begin?

If these are questions you'd like to have answered, make plans to attend Hancock Medical Center's film showing of "The Miracle of Life."

This film is the first of its kind—showing the human conception process filmed from within the human body. "The Miracle of Life" takes the viewer on an incredible voyage through the human body as a new life begins: from the moment of conception through fetal development to birth.

The film tracks the egg as it is released from the ovary as well as the sperm from its early development through ejaculation and then on its journey toward the egg.

The program is scheduled for Thursday, March 23 at 7 p.m. in the Hancock Medical Center cafeteria. Guest speaker will be Dr. Mike Gibney, OB/GYN with HMC.

Reservations are requested as seating will be limited. For more information about the program or to make reservations, call Hancock Medical Center at 467-9081 ext. 2180 between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Fourth graders invited to enter Pascagoula museum's poster contest

The Scranton Museum announces its Second Annual Environmental Awareness Poster Contest. The purpose of this contest is to promote an increased awareness of Mississippi's natural resources among our young people.

The theme of this year's contest is "Predators: To Eat or To Be Eaten." Predators are animals that catch other animals for food. In nature, this is the way animals survive.

Each entrant should draw a poster that includes a predator, its prey or the animal being caught, the habitat where these animals would live, and anything else you feel might be important to the life or death of your animals.

All predators drawn should live in Mississippi. The animals may live in water, on land, or in the sky. Examples would include alligators, raccoons, frogs, sharks, bass, hawks, spiders, and snakes.

The contest will be open to fourth grade students only. Children attending elementary school in Mississippi will be eligible to enter.

All drawings must be on paper, 18"x24" or smaller. The student's name, address, telephone number, school, teacher's name and poster title must appear on the back of the poster. Entries may be mailed together from a class or individually.

Posters will be judged on creativity, accuracy, and artistic ability. A total 15 finalists will be chosen from the entries, all of whom will receive a one-year subscription to National Wildlife Federation's "Ranger Rick" Youth Magazine.

The first place winner will also receive a 35 mm camera and film, second place—binoculars, and third place—two animal identification guides. All winning posters will be displayed at the Scranton Museum May 23-July 9.

Mail entries to 'Environmental Awareness Poster Contest, Scranton Museum, P.O. Drawer 908, Pascagoula, MS 39567. Posters must be received by May 1. Winners will be notified on or about May 12.
